Noon at Tiffany's

By Echo Heron

In the summer of 1888, Clara Wolcott, a daring young artist from Ohio, walked into Louis Tiffany's Manhattan office to interview for a job as a designer. For the next 21 years, her pivotal role in his multi-million dollar empire remained one of Tiffany's most closely guarded secrets--a secret that when revealed 118 years later sent the international art world into a tailspin. Basing her story on a recently discovered cache of letters written between 1888 and 1944, New York Times bestselling author Echo Heron artfully blends fact with fiction to draw the reader into the remarkable life of one of America's most prolific and extraordinary women artists: Clara Wolcott Driscoll, the hidden genius behind the iconic Tiffany lamps.

The search for the perfect book for our 2016 Community Read began on January 1, 2016, with nominations from our Clifton Park and Halfmoon communities. Nominations ended May 31. During the summer months our Book Selection Committee narrowed nominations to five great reads. Voting took place from September 15-October 31.

Related community activities for all ages begin in January.
